Networks

You have many networks, both formal and informal. A network can be an organization, institution, company or individual you associate with.

Networks

Associated with Machine Tools Manufacturers Association, Digital Partner at Trikon Baugh Ka Raja

Skills

The more you know about the talents and abilities of the people in your network the better equipped you are to find (and refer!) competent affordable products and services when the need arises. And when you're trying to round up business opportunities, the more people know about your skills, the better your chances!

Skills

Sales and Marketing

How well do you know the people you want to include in your network? Chances are you have a little homework to do. Spend more time with the people you already know and concentrate on learning these five essentials – their goals, accomplishments, interests, networks and skills. Make sure you give back the same kind of information. The more they know about you, the faster your name will come to mind when an opportunity arises in which your products, services, knowledge, skills or experience might play a part.
